CHANGES IN ASIA.

There is scarce any thing more worthy of note in the present asp et of the world than the breaking up of Oriental conservatism. Within a few years past changes have been introduced and relations with the Powerof Christendom established-ather voluntary or compulsive-which look like the beginning of a new condition of society and poli-

In Persia-for a long time past a declining Power-great reforms are taking place. -Since the dismissal from office of Sadrazum Mirza Aga Chan, the Shab bas been regulating the finances and reorganizing the army upon a European footing. Several efficient European officers have been engaged to teach the use of different firearms to the Persian army. Gen. Krisch, a former Austrian officer, is organizing the artiflery; Col. Barbara, a Neapolitan, is instructing the cavalry and guard of the Shah; while a number of French officers, who were engaged by Feruk Chan on his last visit to Europe, are likewise in the military service. The reforms of the present ruler of Persia extend not only to military but to the entire government of the country. European ideas are invading that ancient monarchy, which has remained for so many ages in the same imperfect stage of civilization.

The progress of Eastern Russia is one of the remarkable phenomena of the present time. Siberia has been civilized by the exiles sent thitber, and by voluntary emigration from Russia, till nearly four out of the five million inhabitants of that region are Laropeans or of European descent; more fortunate than their western kinemen in this. that there is not a serf among them. On their southern frontier the Russians have been slowly but steadily encreaching on the Tartur provinces. They have gradually absorbed and changed the character of almost the entire province of Mantchooria .-Russian cities, manufacturing towns and tradere' posts are springing up on the banks of the Amoor as they spring up in our Western country.

Whatevever doubts may be entertained by some, of the opening of free intercourse between China and the civilized world, one thing is certain, that there never has been so strong a desire on the part of the nations of Christendom to break through the barriers she has set up against the intrusion of foreigners, as there now is. All the rest of the world seems to be conspiring against China and her probibitory system. Ravaged and weakened as that country is by civil wars, she must be fortunate indeed it she can long withstand the assaults of the power of the whole trading world, bringing their navies to open her ports at the cannon's mouth .-Treaty after treaty is extorted from her, each treaty probably to be made the sulject of new misunderstandings, which will be followed by a demand for larger concessions. We may presume that it will not be possible for China long to escape being dragged into the sphere of those influences which are rapidly changing the character of the East .-Whether a freer intercourse with China would be of any benefit to our own country, except in a mercantile point of view, and whether the commercial advantages might not | the remainder has been under cultivation as a be more than counterbalanced by certain moral mischiefs, are points which we will not stop to discuss. Japan, so long closed to all nations but the Dutch, and hitherto little known to the European world, is opened to the commerce of promised with the Powers whose vessels she inspect it. Terms will be one third cash, and a Christendom, and diplomatic intercourse is admits to her ports. If we may believe the favorable accounts lately given of the people more likely to be of that country, they are contaminated than made better by their intercourse with the people of Europe and America-else there is no truth in the maxim that evil communications corrupt good manners. We have already seen, in one of the purnals, a philanthropic expression of sorrow for the virtuous Japanese, whose fate prohably is to be corrupted by the contagion of European vices.

Meanwhile the Arab race in Northern Africa sees the remains of Saracen civilization gradually becoming merged in the civilization of Europe. It is not probable that France will remain content with the provinces she now possesses in that region. Tunis and Morocco, if her system of Algerine civilization should prove in any degree successful, lands of the late Andrew Hoover, - Ross and will fall next under her power. Egypt is becoming Europeanized-an Arab province governed by European ir fluence-an arena on which French and English enterprise are contending for the mastery. In Turkey the discontents of the Mussulman population, and the outrages they have committed on the Christians, are caused by seeing the progress of Frank influence, and by a consciouscess of the danger that the Christians may become their masters and lawgivers. All over Western Asia the useful and ornamental arts, in those forms in which they were practised by the Saracens, are passing into disuse. Toe Arab women of Jericho wear French and English calicoes; the looms of Manchester weave cotton stuffs for the Mosiems of Damascus. French manufacturer- go with their workmen into Spria and set up mills on the streams that flow down from Lebanon.

The Indian peninsula, as soon as the re belion of the natives is fully quelled, will become, under the new organization of its government, more unlike than ever to what it was under its Oriental rulers. The English have obtained a new station in the waters that part Persia from Arabia; they have seized the unoccupied island of Perim, commanding the mouth of the Euphrates, and will make it the resort of their fleets. Every where the power of the West is aggrandizing itself; every where the power of the East wanes and passes into decay .- New York
